START THE BOY RIGHT.

Many a father has made the mistake the prodigals father made by giving the boy too much cash and too little attention. Some Maysville dads would do well to give their sons a better idea of the church. Money is not the whole thing in this world as some suppose. Christian character is of more lasting value. Tomorrow is a Go-to-Church and Go-to-Bible-School day. Therefore, fathers, take your sons to some Sunday School service. SYNOPSIS.

Challis Wrandall is found murdered in a road house near New York. Mrs. Wrandall is summoned from the city and identifies the body. A young weman who accompanied Wrandall to the inn and subsequently disappeared, is suspected. Wrandall, it appears, had led a gay life and neglected his wife. Mrs. Wrandall starts back for New York in an auto during a blinding snow storm. On the way she meets a young woman in the road who proves to be the woman who killed Wrandall. Feeling that the girl had done her a service in ridding her of the man who though she loved him deeply, had caused her great sorrow. Mrs. Wrandall determines to sheld her and takes her to her own home. Mrs. Wrandall hears the story of Hetty Castleton's life, except that portion that relates to Wrandall. This and the story of the tragedy she forbids the girl ever to tell. She offers Hetty a home, friendship and security from perlion account of the tragedy. Mrs. Sara Wrandall and Hetty attend the funeral of Challis Wrandall at the home of his parents.

Beside Sara Wrandall, on the small, pink divan, sat a stranger in this somber company: a young woman in black, whose pale face was uncovered, and whose lashes were lifted so rarely that one could not know of the deep. real pain that lay behind them, in her Irish blue eyes.

She had arrived at the house an hour or two before the time set for the ceremony, in company with the widow. True to her resolution, the widow of Challis Wrandall had remained away from the home of his people until the last hour. She had been consulted, to be sure, in regard to the final arrangements, but the meetings had taken place in her own apartment, many blocks distant from the house in lower Fifth avenue. The afternoon before she had received Redmond Wrandall and Leslie, his son. She had not sent for them. They came perfunctorily and not through any sense of obligation. These two at least knew that sympathy was not what she wanted, but peace. Twice during the two trying days, Leslie had come to see her, Vivian telephoned.

On the occasion of his first visit, Leslie had met the guest in the house. The second time he called, he made it a point to ask Sara all about her.

It was he who gently closed the door after the two women when, on the morning of the funeral, they entered the dark, flower-laden room in they had peered with widely varying which stood the casket containing the body of his brother. He left them alone together in that room for half an hour or more, and it was he who went forward to meet them when they came forth. Sara leaned on his arm as she ascended the stairs to the room where the others were waiting. The ashen-faced girl followed.

Mrs. Wrandall, the elder, kissed Sara and drew her down beside her on the couch. To her own surprise, as well as that of the others, Sara broke down and wept bitterly. After all, she was sorry for Challis' mother. It was the human instinct, she could not hold out against it. And the older heart to denounce her to the world. woman put away the ancient grudge she held against this mortal enemy and dissolved into tears of real compassion.

A little later she whispered brokenly in Sara's ear: "My dear, my dear, this has brought us together. I hope you will learn to love me."

Sara caught her breath, but uttered no word. She looked into her motherin-law's eyes, and smiled through her tears. The Wrandalls, looking on in amaze, saw the smile reflected in the face of the older woman. Then it was that Vivian crossed quickly and put her arms about the shoulders of her sister-in-law. The white flag on both Hetty Castleton stood alone and wavering, just inside the door. No stranger situation could be imagined than the one in which this unfortunate girl found herself at the present moment. She was virtually in the hands of those who would destroy her; she was in the house of those who most deeply were affected by her act on that fatal night. Among them all she stood, facing them, listening to the moans and sobs, and yet her limbs did not give way beneath her.

Some one gently touched her arm. It was Leslie. She shrank back, a fearful look in her eyes. In the semidarkness he failed to note the expres-

"Won't you sit here?" he asked, indicating the little pink divan against the wall. "Forgive me for letting you stand so long."

She looked about her, the wild light still in her eyes. She was like a rat

Her lips parted, but the word of thanks did not come forth. A strange, inarticulate sound, almost a gasp, came instead. Pallid as a ghost, she dropped limply to the divan, and dug her fingers into the satiny seat. As if fascinated, she stared over the black heads of the three women immediately in front of her at the fullngth portrait hanging where the from the hall fell upon it: the a dashing youth in riding transpired while Sara was in the room below with her guest-her companion, as he had come to regard her without having in fact been told as much-he most overwhelming emotions.

To go back: The door had barely Hetty's trembling knees gave way beror, she slipped to the floor, covering her face with her hands.

Sara knelt beside her. "Come," she said gently, but firmly; we are to go on together, as we have put you to. Come; I know it is hard, I know it is terrible, but it is the true test of your ability to go through with that may come up."

She waited a long time, her hand on the girl's shoulder. At last Hetty arose

"You are right," she said hoarsely. "I should not be afraid." Later on they sat over against the emotions. Sara had said: "You know that I loved him."

The girl put her hands to her eyes and bowed her head.

"Oh, how can you be so merciful to me?"

"Because he was not," said Sara, white-lipped. Hetty glanced at the half-averted face with queer, indescribable expression in her eyes

If Leslie Wrandall could have looked any time during the half an hour that followed, he would have known who was the slaver of his brother, but it is doubtful if he could have had the pigments: he was an artist.

When they were ready to leave the room Hetty had regained control of her nerves to a most surprising extent, a condition unmistakably due to the influence of the older woman.

"I can trust myself now, Mrs. Wrandall." said Hetty steadily as they hesitated for an instant before turning the knob of the door.

"Then I shall ask you to open the door," said Sara, drawing back. Without a word or a look, Hetty opened the door and permitted the other to pass out before her. Then she followed, closing it gently, even deliberately, but not without a swift glance over her shoulder into the depths of the room they were leaving.

Of the two, Sara Wrandall was the paler as they went up the broad staircase with Leslie.

The funeral oration by the Rev. Dr. Maltby dragged on. Among all his hearers there was but one who believed the things he said of Challis Wrandall, and she was one of two persons who, so they saying goes, are Booth was thirty-perhaps a year or two older; tall, dark and good looking. The air of the thoroughbred marked him. He did not affect loose, flowing cravats and baggy trousers, nor was he careless about his fingernails. He was simply the ordinary, every-day sort of chap you would meet in Fifth avenue during parade hours, and you would take a second look at him because of his face and manner but not on account of his dress. Some of his ancestors came over ahead of the Mayflower, but he did not gloat.

Leslie Wrandall was his closest friend and harshest critic. It didn't really matter to Booth what Leslie said of his paintings: he quite understood that he didn't know anything about them.

"What do you mean?" "Vivian's a bit of a snob. She never liked the place because old man Gooch built it out of worsteds. She never went there."

"But the old man's been dead for rears.

"That doesn't matter. The fact is, Vivian didn't quite take to Sara until after-well, until after Challis died. We're dreadful snobs, Brandy, the whole lot of us. > "Where is she now?" "She's comfortable enough now When I wrote to Sara about what she'd been through, she settled a neat bit of money on her, and she'll never want for anything. She's out west somewhere, with her mother and sisters. I tell you, Sara's a wonder. She's got a heart of gold." "I look forward to meeting her old man."

"I was with her for a few weeks this winter. In Nice, you know. Vivian stayed on for a week, but mother had to get to the baths. 'Gad, I believe she hated to go. Sara's got a most adorable girl staying with her. A daughter of Colonel Castleton, and she's connected in some way with the Murgatroyds-old Lord Murgatroyd, asked the painter, after a long period you know. "A type, a positive type. Never saw such eyes in all my life. Dammit, they haunt you. You dream about 'em."

"You seem to be hard hit," said Booth indifferently. He was watching the man in the "slicker" through

It would not have surprised him in the least if she had declined the invitation, feeling, as he did, that he had in a way come to her with a white flag or an olive branch look. As soon as they were alone Hetty turned to her friend.

Sara shook her head, and the words died on the girl's lips. "You must play the game, Hetty."

"It's-very hard," murmured the other, her face very white and bleak. "If they should ever find out," gasped the girl, suddenly giving way to the dread that had been lying dor-said Sara smiling through her tears. "How silly of me to cry. It must be the room we are in. These are the same rooms, dear, that you came to on the night we met. Ah, how old I feel!"

"Old? You say that to me? I am ages and ages older than you," cried Hetty, the color coming back to her soft cheeks. "You are twenty-three."

"And you are twenty-eight." Sara had a far-away look in her eyes. "About your size and figure," said she, and Hetty did not comprehend.

beachland and hills, inserted between part of his wilderness into a millionaire's paradise, where he could dawdle money with a prodigality that came so late in life to him that he made waste of both in his haste to live down a rather parsimonious past.

Two miles and a half away, in the heart of a scattered colony of purseproud New Yorkers, was the country home of the Wrandalls, an imposing place and older by far than South-Redmond Wrandall, and, with others of its kind, looked with no little scorn upon the modern, mushroom structures that sprouted from the seeds of trade. There was no friendship between the old and the new. Each had recourse to a bitter contempt for the other, though consolation was small in comparison.

It was in the wooded by-ways of this despised domain that Challis Wrandall and Sara, the earthly daughter of Midas, met and loved and defied all "I know, my dear," said Sara gently. things supernal, for matches are made in heaven. Their marriage did not open the gates of Nineveh. Sebastian Gooch's paradise was more completely ostracised than it was before the disaster. The Wrandalls spoke of it as a disaster.

Clearly the old merchant was not over-pleased with his daughter's choice, a conclusion permanently established by the alteration he made in his will a year or two after the marriage. True, he left the vast estate to his beloved daughter Sara, but he fastened a stout string to it, and with this string her hands were tied. It must have occurred to him that Challis was a profligate in more ways than one, for he deliberately stipulated in his will that Sara was not to sell a foot of the ground until a period of twenty years had elapsed. A very polite way, it would seem, of making his investment safe in the face of considerable odds.

He lived long enough after the making of his will, I am happy to relate, to find that he had made no mistake. As he preceded his son-in-law into the great beyond by a scant three years, it readily may be seen that he wrought too well by far. Seventeen unnecessary years of proscription remained, and he had not intended them for Sara alone. He was not afraid of Sara, but for her. When the will was read and the condition revealed, Challis Wrandall took it in perfect good humor. He had the grace to proclaim in the bosom of his father's family that the old gentleman was a father-in-law to be proud of. "A canny old boy," he had announced with his most engaging smile, quite free from rancor or resentment. Challis was well acquainted with himself. And so the acres were strapped together snugly and firmly, without so much as a town lot protruding. So impressed was Challis by the farsightedness of his father-in-law that he forthwith sat him down and made a will of his own. He would not have it said that Sara's father did a whit better by her than he would do. He left everything he possessed to his wife, but put no string to it, blandly implying that all danger would be past when she came into possession. There was a sort of grim humor in the way he managed to present him-

"Heavens! You don't mean to say

"Certainly not! She is a perfect lady, and would not flirt with any man. She thinks her husband is the finest man in the world." "Perhaps he is."

"And you with a husband of your own to say such a thing as that! I have often wondered if you and Mr. Camuel got along as well as you-"

"We get along as well as some other people I could mention."

"Meaning me and my husband, of course. We have our spats on the nights when he comes home overworked and cross. I won't stand any of his growly bear business from any man. A man should at least bring some sunshine with him when he comes from town."

"That's the way I look at it. Jack Easterlie and I quarrel occasionally, but on the whole we get along as well as our neighbors. But we were talking about Mrs. Braynerd. In what way do you suppose she will go about spoiling our husbands? I don't expect that she can spoil either of them -much.'

"That's the truth! But the danger lies in the different manner in which she handles her husband."

"Well, her husband is a smaller man than either of our husbands, and we couldn't begin to handle ours."

"I did not mean in that w.y. Take, for instance, last night. An ild friend of Mr. Braynerd's came into own and went out there for supper. He had only an hour and a half w !! train, and Mr. Braynerd went to e train with him, telling his dau

"Same here! I'll bet Jack's lan guage would blister the paint on the house if I should do a thing like that.' "But the worst is yet to come When he got to Warburton's he found a similar note or their door, reading 'We have all been invited over to Mr and Mrs. Cleavage's to meet some friends of theirs from Cleveland Come on over.' And that was signed with the name of Mrs. Braynerd and the children."

"The idea!" "Right there is where my husband would have got Cleavage's on the tele phone and read the riot act to me." "Same here. But what did Mr Braynerd do?"

'The Braynerds remained at Cleav age's quite a while, then they wen back to Warburton's, and when the got there they found that Mr. Bray nerd had turned the note over and written: 'I have gone home. All o you come up there."

"And did he roast his wife when he got her home?"

"He was not there. When they arrived home-the Braynerds, I mean, and the Warburtons with them-they found ! note saying: 'I have decided to go around to Cleavage's. Come around there.' And when they got to Cleavage's they found a note reading: I have gone back home.' So they all dragged their weary feet around there. LESSON FOR MAY 3

THE PRODIGAL SON.

LESSON TEXT-Luke 15:11-32. GOLDEN TEXT-"I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight." Luke 15:18.

The parables of Jesus are marvels of unity and condensation, yet no necessary detail is omitted. This, perhaps his most famous, is no exception even though it does carry a double lesson. Who thinks of the older brother when this story is mentioned? Though designated the "Story of the Prodigal," we need to remind ourselves that the word "prodigal" never once occurs in the story. The opening sentence speaks of a father and of two sons. It is really the parable of a perfect father, the unveiling of RED, ROUGH HANDS MADE the true heart of God. Against that background is set off a self-centered son lacking in natural affection. Also alongside the wayward son is the miserly, selfish one who lacked all the good qualities of his brother, but who was truly a wanderer and out of harmony with God the Father. In the background we see the citizens of the far country who helped this young Jew to his place of want, famine and degradation. Remember, it is our Lord speaking to Jews. When the Gentiles of the far country sent him to feed swine they insulted him by compelling him to get his living through an occupation instinctively repulsive.

First Fruit of Sin.

The father makes equal partition 'divided unto them." (V. 12) though neither son had a right to demand a partition of his estate. At the bottom of the son's request was aedesire to have his own way-to be independent of God. He did not go away from home at once, though his heart was already in the "far country."

I. Into the Far Country, vv. 13-16. Fun is the first fruit of sin, and that the son readily found so long as his money lasted (Heb. 11:25). But the consequences followed closely on its trail, for when he had "spent all" he began to be in "want." There are many attractive things about this young man, but those qualities were perverted, they lacked control, they were good servants but bad taskmasters. It is not always physical, temporal want that comes to the sinner, there are deeper and more intense longings-soul want and soul hunger. These always come to the soul away from God. Being in want does not mean that a man's will has been subdued. Some prodigals in the most abject temporal need are as proud as Lucifer, and boast of their rebellion. So he "joined himself to a citizen of the country." He did not belong there-the citizen did. He was set to the most degrading task imaginable for a Jew-feeding swine.

Like a Lost Sheep. II. The Home Coming, vv. 17-24.

The first step was for the son to stop and really think. That is where salvation always begins-in thinking. He knew he was lost, e. g., out of adjustment, in the wrong place, out of his element and like the lost sheep, "ready to die." He saw his condition, money gone, friends gone, hogs for companions, no food for his sustenance. He saw his value. He was more important than the servants of his father's home. He saw his father's love, already manifested in what. had been given him and we fain would believe that when he left home he had the father's urgent plea to return. He saw a way to escape from his present position. All of this after "Death Valley," California, sur he "came to himself." The father had not once forgotten him; he "had compassion" even though the son was unmerciful to himself and to all of his loved ones. The father kissed him before he was washed or otherwise made presentable. His real need was paramount to that evidenced by his rags, hunger, or the ravages of his dissipation. When he did make his confession (vv. 20, 21), we note no reference to the matter of his becoming a servant. It is doubtful if the father gave him an opportunity to state that part of his resolve. Then there came forth the "best robe" (Isa. 61:10: Phil. 3:9 R. V.). And a "ring" the pledge of his sonship, Eph. 1:13, 14; Gal. 4:6, and shoes also, Eph. 6:15. Then there was the fatted calf. feasting and merriment, of which there was no end. "Well, I'm quite a hand for dreaming that way. For one thing, I was going to give this young couple a fine party. They are both musical, and this was to be an event of some magnitude. I figured I'd have Caruso to sing and Paderewski to accompany him. Some class, eh?" "Yes, indeed!"

For red, rough, chapped and bleeding hands, dry, fissured, itching, burning palms, and painful finger-ends, with shapeless nails, a one-night Cuticura treatment works wonders. Directions: Soak the hands, on retiring, in hot water and Cuticura Soap. Dry, anoint with Cuticura Ointment, and wear soft bandages or old, loose gloves during the night. These pure, sweet and gentle emollients preserve the hands, prevent redness, roughness and chapping, and impart in a single night that velvety softness and whiteness so much desired by women. For those whose occupations tend to injure the hands, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are wonderful.

TORTURING TWINGES

Much so-called rheumatism is caused by weakened kidneys. When the kidneys fail to clear the blood of uric acid, the acid forms into crystals like bits of broken glass in the muscles, joints and on the nerve casings. Torturing pains dart through the affected part whenever it is moved. By curing the kidneys, Doan's Kidney Pills have eased thousands of rheumatic cases, lumbago, sciatica, gravel, neuralgia and urinary disorders.

Sick Women Attention

Is it possible there is a woman in this country who continues to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, which proves beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other one medicine in the world?

We have published in the newspapers of the United States more genuine testimonial letters than have ever been published in the interest of any other medicine for womenand every year we publish many new testimonials, all genuine and true. Here are three never before published:

The Federal league is beginning to appreciate that base ball in season is a different affair from the winter article.-Times-Star.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company had on April 1 exactly 89,602 shareholders, who held an average of 111.44 shares. This is the largest number of shareholders the Pennsylvania has ever had, and an increase of 12,756 as compared with April 1, 1913, while the average holdings have decreased 6.69 shares compared with last year.

Huerta has proved himself an able man, if not a man to be admired or a man to the liking of our officials or of our people, and it must be said in all fairness that Americans and other foreigners have suffered less and have been better protected within the territory he has controlled than those who have been exposed to the bandit band of Zapata or Villa, or those of Durango and Tepic.-Cincinnati En-

FOREIGNERS WILL DICTATE THE PRICE.

The removal of the duty on corn by this Democratic Congress has changed conditions. Heretofore the prices have been determined by the American farmer, this Free-Trade Tariff enables the Argentine corn grower to dictate the price at which the American corn grower shall sell his corn. What are you going to do about it?-Waukon (Ia.) Standard.

"SPRING FEVER"

The right formula for the prevention of spring fever is to eschew alcholic beverages-of course this is a free country and you may prefer spring fever and alcoholic beverages—and eat a little less than you do in winter time. There should be some fruit and green salads in your menu, and not too much meat. Open air, plus judicious exercise, helps.

It has been pointed out that the French who believed in leading an easy indolent life and taking a trifle of stimulant against the rigors of the tropical climate did not build the Panama Canal. Americans who believed in temperance, to the point of abstinence during working hours at least, built the Panama Canal.

Yours is the choice, these mellow, mild spring days, and of course, you may be a person of leisure and, having no canals to build, may be in a position to disregard the formula for keeping strenuous .-Frankfort State Journal.

BUT ONE WAY-GO AFTER THE GREASERS.

The quixotic idealism of Secretary Bryan in dealing with a nation like Mexico, whose history and acts show that her people are still semi-barbarous in the main, may sound well when it is defended from a chautauqua platform, but it will go down in history as one of the biggest bits of idiotic statesmanship in connection with the annals of the United States.

What this government can gain by "sitting tight" at Vera Cruz is unfathomable to any person who has either read, pondered or even casually bumped into Iberian semi-civilization or with the Indian tribes of America.

There is but one way to handle a nettle, and that is to grasp it firmly and crush it. To handle it gingerly and daintily, as Wilson and Bryan are doing in Mexico, is to get innumerable stings, rebuffs, assaults and reprisals from as many points. as there are factional chiefs in Mexico.

The talk of preparedness of the departments at Washington to meet the situation is not borne out by the facts, and the inane philanderings of Andy Carnegie's peace apostle are dangerously futile and will surely lead to angles which will prove a more difficult problem to solve than the Indian war we now have on to the south of us.-Chillicothe (O.) OUR ARMY.

Our army consists of 84,859 men and 4,745 of ficers.. There is in the National Guard 122,694 men and officers. In addition to these the law provides that every able-bodied man between the ages of 18 and 45 belongs to the militia, subject | 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 to call to arms when needed. Of this number there is 16,004,683, which number exceeds the whole population of Mexico.

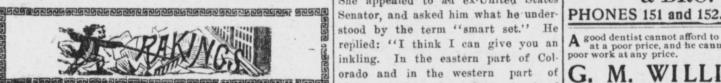

If we have war with Mexico there are ready for service, the regular army and the national guard together aggregating 212,278 soldiers, counting both officers and men. If they are all called into service, there will not be many volunteers needed. for certainly 200,000 soldiers will march all over Mexico. So young fellows who are waiting to go into a Mexican war, are liable to be disappointed, even if we have war, which is by ne means certain. In fact, the probabilities are that the President will save the country from war.

SELF-RESPECT AND PAINT.

A thousand American cities and towns have taken up the National Clean Up and Paint Up Campaign. It has been indorsed by thousands of civic, commercial and women's organizations all over the nation. The cities that have made themselves throwing stones at me, I'll turn the a part of the movement are cleaner and better cities bears on you and they'll eat you up.' because of it.

From time to time the Department of Agriculture urges upon the people of the country and the small town the necessity of the use of paint. Beauty and economy are the reasons dwelt upon by the government experts. Add to the beauty and economy the fact that paint has a sanitary value and the arguments apply with added force to the big cities.

The house that is painted is the better for it. A neighborhood that has cleaned up and painted up is a better one in which to live. Paint makes for self-respect and justifiable pride.—Ashland Independent.

Into her eyes of tender blue He gazed so sweetly down, And said, "Dear, are those lots of yours In country or in town?"

"Isn't the music wonderful?" he asked, gazing into her blue eyes.

There was a slight pause, during which they hesitated four times around the floor. "Yes," she replied thoughtfully, "and the floor-isn't the floor divine?" She thought she had never seen cuter.

There was another intellectual pause.

"Perfect," he agreed. "The floor and the music are both splendid."

"Yes, both," she breathed.

Again he plumbed the depths of her blue eyes.

Again she let him plumb.

"You know," he whispered, "sometimes the music is perfect and the floor is terrible, and then again-" "The floor is perfect and the music is terrible," she took him up quickly and pertly. "I know."

Says Insult To Stars and Stripes is Not a Mediatory Offense.

Washington .- "I am very much afraid other nations will think there is a yellow streak running down our back if we don't brace up," said Representative John W. Langley, of Kentucky, in a statement which he issued in regard to the Mexican mediation problem. Langley is one of the Republicans who has been loyally supporting the President in his war policy. He voted for the Administration's resolution declaring the President's course justified and he has been doing all he could to hold up the hands of the President. But this latest new-fangled mediation proposal, figuratively speaking, has got the Congressman from the Tenth Ken tucky District "going."
